Army To Halve National Guard At Little Rock

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13 (A)-The Army said today the 950-man force of federalized National Guardsmen still on duty in the school integration troubles at Little Rock will be reduced to 432 next Wednesday.

By MERRIMAN SMITH WASHINGTON, Dec. 13

(UP) — President Eisenhower left by plane for Paris late today on a historic mission to shore up western defenses against the challenges posed by Russia's missile - satellite successes. The President was scheduled to land at Paris' Orly airfield aboard his private plane, Columbine III. Saturday morning. He will attend the all-important "summit" meeting of the North Atlantic Trealy

Council which opens Monday. The meeting was designed to re-vamp the western alliance in the light of new Soviet achievements in the diplomatic and scientific fields. The President's determina-tion to attend the meeting, despite his recent stroke, underscored its importance.

'Excellent Recovery'

Although he has made an "excellent" recovery from his mild stroke Nov. 25, the President was accompanied on his flight by his personal physician, Maj. Howard McC. Snyder, who will keen a close eye on his patient throughout the NATO sessions.

Snyder and the President's other doctors earlier this week pronounced him well enough to go to Paris despite the fact that he had not fully recovered from his slight stroke. He still suffers rom a slight speech impairment.

In anticipation of his flight, the President arrived at his White House desk at 8:20 a.m. to clean up some last-minute work. He took time out to chat for 10 minutes with Daniel Ahmling Chapman, the new ambassador from

By MERRIMAN SMITH WASHINGTON, Dec. 13 (UP) - President Eisenhower left by plane for Paris late today on a historic mission to shore up western defenses against the challenges posed by Russia's missile - satellite successes. The President was scheduled to land at Paris' Orly airfield aboard his private plane, Columbine III. Saturday morning. He will attend the all-important "summit" ing of the North Atlantic Treaty Council which opens Monday.

The meeting was designed to revamp the western alliance in the light of new Soviet achievements in the diplomatic and scientific fields. The President's determination to attend the meeting, despite his recent stroke, underscored its importance.

'Excellent Recovery'

Although he has made an "excellent" recovery from his mild stroke Nov. 25, the President was accompanied on his flight by his physician, Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder, who will keep a close eye throughout the NATO sessions. Snyder and the President's other doctors earlier this week pronounced him well enough to go to Paris despite the fact that he had not fully recovered from his slight stroke. He still suffers rom a slight speech impairment.

In anticipation of his flight, the President arrived at his White House desk at 8:20 a.m. to clean up some last-minute work. took time out to chat for 10 minutes with Daniel Ahmling Chapman, the new ambassador from Besides meeting, the President and his aides were expected to consult with western leaders about his reply to the recent letter of Soviet Pre-mier Nikolai A. Bulganin, proposing new East-West "summit" talks to ease world tensions.

The State Department has branded the letter as an attempt to undermine the NATO meeting. But officials said the President's reply would be as "affirmative as flames under control about two time bombs at the U. S. air base cratic leader Adlai E. Stevenson.

When we speak of the Civitan club we at once think of fruit cake so superior that each year at holiday time every Civitan club in the nation so far as we know, is putting out members to make sales. And the cakes carry out the slog-an "They sell like hot cakes." Word came here in the monthly Civitan magazine that a Civitan club in Hartford, Conn., had sold this month 10,000 of these unusual cakes which are made from a pre-Civil war southern recipe.

NATO Fence Mending

It is regrettable but true that Christmas, 1957, does not find the world at peace. So important is the NATO meeting this week in Paris that President Eisenhower has chosen to represent the United States in spite of his recently suffered stroke. And the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is a defense force in need of more pruning hooks to be heaten into longer spears.

At the end of World War II, General Eisenhower was the Supreme commander of the allied forces in Europe. He had accomplished the nearly super-human task of welding diverse factions together to furnish a fighting force which destroyed the German war machine.

At the pinnacle of his military career, Mr. Eisenhower tried to win Russian friends with the same attitude of open friendliness and give-and-take which had held the British, French and N. S. policy makers in accord in the heat of battle.

He won the individuals. The exchange of correspondence with Zhukov was more than a formality of state. In all probability, these were sincere exchanges of ideas. But he could not influence Russian policy.

War on Capitalism was declared by Karl Marx in 1848, and the declaration has not been deviated from by any communist leader up to the present.

Certainly every attempt was made towards reconciliation during the entire decade of the 1940's by the western nations. It may be recalled England leaned leftward and elected a socialist government. President Truman went so far as to propose a personal visit to Stalin in 1949. In the long run, it has been Russia which has refused to give an inch toward "coexistence."

With such set policies and directions on the part of Soviet Russia and all the nations within the communist stronghold, western nations cannot help but appear indecisive by comparison.

The stand taken by the United States, with its many factions offering means to combat the gains of communism, has produced much uncertainty.

No doubt, this country is in no position to take on the job of defending the free world alone. Too often, however, high level conferences have produced more bickering than blueprints for pres-BASCOM TIMMONS ervation. It is urgent that the United States press for a realignment of allies under the same leadership which succeeded in war if the Paris Conference is to produce the necessary results.

We believe President Eisenhower can provide the leadership at the NATO meeting in Paris to weld that organization into an as effective force as he Force Chief of Staff Gen. Thomas paredness Subcommittee began figures."

D. White admits that all the prob- looking into the lagging missile did as Supreme Commander in World lems involved in the development program. One minority opinion Certainly, the President is placing would happen to flight honus pay the importance of the NATO meeting for airmen once missiles replace airplanes. "We've given that a above his own personal health. This is lot of thought and something will the mark of a true leader and he should have to be done." White explained. "I'll tell you one thing. We are have all our backing in the vital task now designing an asignia for misfacing him.

Marriage Mills

Enactment by the Mississippi legislature to abolish the so-called marriage mill will be generally applauded throughout the United States. Approval will be almost unanimous, with few if any dissenting voices.

In reality the old laws in Mississippi did not provide any more of a marriage mill than they had done at the time of the origin of that state and the enactment of the first marriage laws. They provided no more of a marriage mill than the laws of other states had done for some centuries. In the beginning the right of immediate marriage was not called a marriage mill.

Mississippi simply was far behind most of the other states in providing a new set of requirements for entering the state of matrimony. Because Mississippi lagged behind in prohibiting immediate marriage it became a mecca for eager-to-marry couples and it also gained a reputation, whether justified or not, of running a marriage mill. NATO Fence Mending

It is regrettable but true that Christmas, 1957, does not find the world at peace. So important is the NATO meeting this week in Paris that President Eisenhower has chosen to represent the United States in spite of his recently suffered stroke. And the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is a defense force in need of more pruning hooks to be beaten into longer spears.

At the end of World War II, General Eisenhower was the Supreme commander of the allied forces in Europe. He had accomplished the nearly super-human task of welding diverse factions together to furnish a fighting force which destroyed the German war machine.

At the pinnacle of his military career, Mr. Eisenhower tried to win Russian friends with the same attitude of open friendliness and give-and-take which had held the British, French and N. S. policy makers in accord in the heat of battle.

He won the individuals. The exchange of correspondence with Zhukov was more than a formality of state. In all probability, these were sincere exchanges of ideas. But he could not influence Russian policy.

War on Capitalism was declared by Karl Marx in 1848, and the declaration has not been deviated from by any communist leader up to the present.

Certainly every attempt was made towards reconciliation during the entire decade of the 1940's by the western nations. It may be recalled England leaned leftward and elected a socialist government. President Truman went so far as to propose a personal visit to Stalin in 1949. In the long run, it has been Russia which has refused to give an inch toward "coexistence."

With such set policies and directions on the part of Soviet Russia and all the nations within the communist stronghold, western nations cannot help but appear indecisive by comparison.

The stand taken by the United States, with its many factions offering means to combat the gains of communism, has produced much uncertainty.

No doubt, this country is in no position to take on the job of defending the free world alone. Too often, however, high level conferences have produced more bickering than blueprints for pres- BASCOM TIMMONS ervation. It is urgent that the United States press for a realignment of allies under the same leadership which succeeded in war if the Paris Conference is to produce the necessary results.

We believe President Eisenhower meeting in Paris to weld that organization into an as effective force as he did as Supreme Commander in World.

Marriage Mills

Enactment by the Mississippi legislature to abolish the so-called marriage mill will be generally applauded throughout the United States. Approval will be almost unanimous, with few if any dissenting voices.

In reality the old laws in Mississippi did not provide any more of a marriage mill than they had done at the time of the origin of that state and the enactment of the first marriage laws. They provided no more of a marriage mill than the laws of other states had done for some centuries. In the beginning the right of immediate marriage was called a marriage mill.

Mississippi simply was far behind most of the other states in providing a new set of requirements for entering the state of matrimony. Because Mississippi lagged behind in prohibiting immediate marriage it became a mecca for eager-to-marry couples and it also gained a reputation, whether justified or not, of running a marriage mill. To escape a sort of stigma not of its own doing, Mississippi was virtually compelled to enact laws more in comformity with those of the other states.

The argument against allowing socalled quickie marriages stems chiefly from the belief that young boys and girls are often lured into sudden and unplanned marriages while intoxicated, which is doubtless true.

This brings up the question of whether 99 per cent or more of the people should be denied the right to be married when they choose because there is a possibility that one per cent or less might marry when they are too drunk to know what they are doing.

As we said in the first place, public opinion, both among social workers and the proletariate, is that a waiting period before allowing a marriage is desirable. The Pierian Club Hears Dr. Oliphint Review How Come Christmas'

Dr. Ben Oliphint, of St. Paul's Methodist Church in Monroe, was guest speaker for the December meeting of the Pierian Club when they met on Tuesday lems, especially when it is a holiafternoon in the Community Cen

Duffie who told the club of a few tend. of the activities Dr. Oliphint is engaged in. In opening Dr. Oliphint said that he would read to the group in dialect "How Come Christmas" by Roark Bradford, a well known Louisiana writer who was born on a plantation in Bos-came, and in a simple environment."

In telling of the author of this book, Dr. Oliphint sai dthat Roark Bradford's writings of the Negro in the old South comes from is intimate love of plantation life and of the southern Negro. Thus he tells of a simple man's knowledge of a Negro Christmas. The scene is set some twenty - five or thirty years ago in a country church. The Pierians were delighted with Df. Oliphint's reading of "How Come Christmas."
